

Vol 1 Donald Jackman, Criticism and Critique: Sidelights on the Konradiner
Table of Contents

I. Reconstruction

- a. The evidence
- b. Methodological considerations

II. An imperial grandddaughter

III. The election of 1024 reconsidered

IV. Dynastic continuity in the later tenth century

V. Aristocratic relations in 945

- a. The Ezzonen
- b. The Welfs
- c. Historiographical and juristic synthesis

VI. Alsatian counts

- a. Rivalry over Montbéliard
- b. The Holy Forest

VII. Notes on the house of Rheinfelden

- a. Kuno von Öhningen and the Welfs
- b. Identifying the Burgundian antecedents

VIII. The repudiation of Ansgard

IX. Early Konradiner

- a. The significance of the Hunfridinger
- b. Konradiner transplantations
- c. Sources of right in France
- d. conclusion

X. Saxon ties in Thuringia

- a. Margraves of the Saxon Ostmark

- b. Dukes of Thuringia
- c. The comital family of Grabfeld
- d. Thuringian aristocrats of the tenth century

XI. Heirs in the Hessian homeland

- a. General basis of inheritance
- b. Counts of Stromburg
- c. Counts of Diex
- d. Ancestors of the house of Nassau
- e. The burgravia succession in Mainz
- f. Counts of Idstein
- g. The Konradiner family structure

XII. The imperial battle standard

- a. Counts introduced from Saxony
- b. The Wernhers of Hessengau
- c. The office of imperial standard bearer
- d. Konrad Kurzbold as duke of Alsace
- e. Gerungs and Ludowinger
- f. The landgraves in Hessengau
- g. Otto of Hammerstein, last of the line

XIII. Conclusion